From the General Manager

As we close out 2023, I want to take a moment to reflect on the past year at Ball State Public Media and share some of our key accomplishments. Despite the ongoing challenges of the pandemic, this has been a year of growth and innovation for our organization as we continue to fulfill our mission of creating educational experiences and presenting trusted stories and information through impactful media and programming.

Some highlights from the past year include:

- Launching the daily podcast “In Case You Missed It” from IPR News, featuring local voices and news. With nearly 1,000 downloads, so far, it quickly became a valued news source.
- Expanding local coverage through a new partnership with the Ball State Daily News, combining the Daily News’ century-long journalism experience with more than 60 years of local news coverage from Indiana Public Radio.
- Implementing the Ball State Public Media Accelerator (PMX) which provides students professional media training and paid work experience. This opens doors for diverse new talent while reducing student debt. Students who work with us all year can defray 100 percent of their in-state tuition costs.
- Enhancing our digital presence with a new smartphone app and on-demand video capabilities, improving accessibility anywhere, anytime, on your time.
- Making commitments, including in our new Vision Statement, to increase diverse perspectives. We added closed captioning to local video programs and improved our physical offices’ accessibility.
- Creating experiences for Pre-K learners by continuing our work in building a Learning Neighborhood through the Ready To Learn grant-funded initiative. We hosted our first in-person Be My Neighbor Day since 2019, with 20 partner organizations participating, live music, activities and more than 450 books distributed.

While we have made significant strides this past year, there is still important work ahead in 2024 and beyond. As we move forward, we will continue to evolve to serve our community, empower diverse voices, uphold journalistic values, and harness the power of media to bring people together.

Thank you for your continued viewership, listenership, and support. We look forward to continuing to create educational experiences and bringing you trusted stories and information in the year ahead.

Wishing you a happy, healthy, and peaceful 2024.

Sincerely,

*Dr. Phil Hoffman

Building Blocks

Ball State Public Media continues to build Learning Neighborhoods through the Ready to Learn grant-funded initiative. Ball State PBS was awarded the grant in 2021 by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB) and PBS to extend the reach of PBS KIDS resources for early learning. Our Learning Neighborhood focus is childcare providers. We also work with local libraries to meet families with young kids where they are and integrate more with others in the community who are working toward many of the same goals as we are with this initiative.

The 2020-2025 Ready to Learning initiative is focused on

connecting children's media with learning environments to build key skills for success in school and life, including functional literacy, critical thinking, and collaboration, as well as showing them career options in age-appropriate ways.

To better support our Learning Neighborhood, we offered Learning Together Bundles created by PBS KIDS for the

Ready to Learn program. Learning Together Bundles are a library of activities, online games, and media options that facilitators can use to build programs. This summer we visited five free meal sites around Muncie to offer a bag of activities related to learning about patterns. We hosted a table at each location with free books, activity bags, and information about Ready To Learn for students and families to continue learning at home. We also created bundles to take to local daycares to spend time with the kids actually doing the activities and learning together about patterns and caring or others. These subjects fit quite nicely into learning objectives for children preparing to attend school.

In October, we launched Family and Community workshops focused on critical thinking based on the show Work It Out Wombats. Program participants read books, played PBS KIDS' games and enjoyed activities focused on sequencing, patterns and the importance of critical thinking.

The Return of Family Fun

In June, Ball State PBS hosted Be My Neighbor Day at Canan Commons in Muncie, In.—our first in-person event since before the pandemic. It was a beautiful day in the neighborhood to celebrate kindness and caring neighbors. More than 20 neighbors (local non-profit organizations) shared crafts, interactive activities and information about their organizations and services.

The event featured live music from The Atomic Sharks and Muncie's Youth Symphony Orchestra, and, of course, a special appearance by Daniel Tiger from PBS KIDS. Local food trucks offered snacks and drinks for attendees. In the pretend neighborhood, visitors could plant seeds, paint rocks, craft a bee, and so much more.

More than 450 books were distributed to the 470 kids who attended the event with their families. This annual event, with Daniel as the star, continues to provide a meaningful opportunity for the community to share and play together.

COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT

Ball State PBS was honored to sponsor Juneteenth Muncie held at McCullough Park on June 17. We distributed materials and books to event attendees and interviewed families about their favorite PBS Kids programs.

Cat in the Hat...he'll visit that! In August, Cat in the Hat went on a mini tour with Ball State PBS for meet and greets at 5 local daycare facilities. We read a classic Dr. Seuss book and offered photos with Cat in the Hat. Each child was given a bookmark and activity packet to continue the learning fun with Cat in the Hat.

DAYCARE PACKETS

Ball State PBS continued our work with local daycares offering weekly activity packets and books. Our team finds fun, educational, thematic activities for each week that encourage creativity, exploration, and learning. Some of the topics for 2023 include: shapes, identifying feelings, seasonal changes, gardening, healthy choices, and more! These packets are made possible through the Ready To Learn grant.

BOOK GIVEAWAY

Ball State Public Media celebrated International Literacy Day with a book bundle giveaway made possible by Ball State PBS's Ready To Learn grant.

The giveaway was promoted via multiple social media platforms and offered to any school, after school care program, or daycare that told us their favorite children's book and why.

Ten groups were chosen at random, including daycares, classrooms, and a local museum, to receive a curated collection of books based on their needs.

Training the Next Generation of Public Media Professionals

LAUNCHING CAREERS

The Public Media Accelerator (PMX) is a unique program that gives highly-motivated students the opportunity to work at Indiana Public Radio and Ball State PBS while exploring careers in public media. The inaugural PMX cohort in 2022-23 of 10 students, worked with Public Media professionals Audio Production, Video Production, Digital Marketing, Community Engagement, Membership, News and Animation/Graphic Design.

PMX is an innovative approach to fulfilling part of the University's strategic mission to provide a meaningful educational experience with an unparalleled immersive learning opportunity for students. PMX Fellows work with staff and faculty mentors on project-based work. PMX Fellows create content, produce programming, design materials, manage projects and participate in fundraising efforts in cooperation with BSPM professional staff.

In May, three PMX Fellows were invited to participate in the PBS Annual Meeting in San Diego. This three-day conference provided a multitude of opportunities to network with and learn from industry leaders including Paula Kerger, CEO of PBS; Pat Harrison, president and CEO of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting as well as PBS program hosts John Leguizamo and Baratunde Thurston. This experience was made possible through the generous support of Ball State's College of Communication, Information and Media and the Pond family.

“WHAT I GOT OUT OF THE PBS ANNUAL MEETING WAS IT MADE ME FEEL VERY COMFORTABLE WITH THE IDEA OF HAVING A FUTURE IN PUBLIC MEDIA.”

Happy Little Fest 2.0

Hundreds of Bob Ross enthusiasts attended BSPM's second annual Happy Little Fest on October 1 to celebrate the legacy of Bob Ross and "The Joy of Painting" at his home studio. The festival featured a "paint like Bob Ross" workshop, allowing guests to tap into their inner artist and create their own masterpieces in the spirit of the late painter. Festival-goers enjoyed outdoor games, a Bob Ross look-alike contest and relaxing in our sensory studio where Bob recorded "The Joy of Painting" with comfortable seating, calm lighting and recordings of Bob's soothing voice. A special exhibit of 24 original Bob Ross paintings on loan from Bob Ross Inc. was displayed in Ball State PBS' studio for festival attendees.

In addition, they also engaged in Bob Ross games and had fun dressing like Bob. It was a day filled with creativity, nostalgia, and celebration of the enduring legacy of Bob Ross.

MUNCIE RENTER'S WORKSHOP

IPR partnered with Indiana Public Broadcasting (IPBS) and Indiana Legal Services to host a workshop to discuss legal rights and responsibilities of renters and landlords at the YWCA of Muncie. Attendees discussed issues concerning housing conditions, eviction prevention, and accessibility requirements. Following the presentation, City of Muncie Human Rights Director Yvonne Thompson provided local resources for attendees.

REGIONAL SPELLING BEE

Ball State PBS hosted the Scripps Regional Spelling Bee on March 11 at Sursa Performance Hall on Ball State University's campus. The competition featured 37 spellers from 29 schools, lasting 19 intense rounds.

Seventh-grader Craig Ulrey from Heritage Hall Christian School won the 2023 Ball State PBS Regional Spelling Bee with the word "condensation."

Felicia Gray from Burriss Laboratory School served as the pronouncer, and the judges were Kamna Agarwal, Stephanie Wiechmann, and Alesya Rathinasamy. The Bee was broadcast on Ball State PBS on March 18 and 23. It is available to stream on the Ball State Public Media App. Ball State PBS has hosted and televised the Regional Spelling Bee for seven years, promoting literacy and lifelong learning.

Welcome Home

A new documentary—“Fleeing to Flyover Country” produced in collaboration with Ball State PBS, Western Kentucky PBS, The Ball State Daily News, The Western Kentucky Herald, and Ball State’s Department of Media—

“THE FILM IS A PRIME EXAMPLE OF HOW DOING THE RIGHT THING BY PEOPLE CAN ALSO BE THE RIGHT THING FOR YOUR LOCAL ECONOMY.”

– Phil Hoffman, GM of Ball State Public Media

details the profound experiences of Bowling Green, Ky., spanning over four decades, as it welcomed refugees and immigrants into its community.

The project meticulously examines the invaluable lessons learned during this period and draws insightful comparisons with Muncie, Ind., which has recently begun its journey of welcoming refugees from Afghanistan and immigrants from around the world.

The documentary raises thought-provoking questions about whether a similar strategy could be employed to rejuvenate Muncie, Ind.—transforming it from a small urban manufacturing city facing economic stagnation into a thriving hub of renewed vitality across neighborhoods, businesses, and educational institutions.

Students from Ball State’s College of Communication, Information, and Media (CCIM) and the Department of Media worked side-by-side with the professionals by gathering the interviews and visuals to tell these compelling stories.

“It is a great honor to get to tell the stories of so many teachers, families, and community leaders who offered their time and opened their homes,” said Lisa Renze-Rhodes, director of Ball State’s Unified Media Lab and writer and director of the film. “It is a privilege to get to work with students and do this kind of impactful storytelling.”

Made possible through the generous support of the Ball Brothers Foundation, this project underscores the idea that ethical choices can also prove to be beneficial for business, shedding light on the potential of community-driven initiatives to revitalize and reshape local economies.

SCREENING EVENT

A special screening of the documentary “Fleeing to Flyover Country” was hosted Oct. 12, at the Ross Community Center in Muncie. A discussion with the filmmakers and key contributors followed the screening, providing the opportunity for the public to engage directly with the creators of the project. Nearly 70 people were in attendance for the screening and panel discussion.

THE FACING PROJECT

IPR's "The Facing Project," a monthly show featuring story performance to highlight a common issue, continues to build empathy through shared experiences. Topics like food insecurity, reaching across party lines, criminal justice reform and searching for peace in a divided Cyprus, are explored through powerful storytelling and real life narrative.

STATE GOVERNMENT DEBATES, SPEECHES AND ELECTION COVERAGE

IPR continued to connect our community with state government by airing live coverage of events including the governor's State of the State address, NPR special coverage relevant to our region—including bi-lingual simulcast of the State of the Union—and real time election night results.

NOW ENTERING...

Ball State PBS's most-popular local program returned for its seventh season in 2023, traveling to Union City, Anderson and Elwood.

"Now Entering..." visits towns in our viewing area, engaging with its residents through town meetings, interviews, and preview screening events. During the broadcast premiere, community members participate in the special pledge event in our studio on the Ball State campus.

The 2023 season shared the stories of former Union City resident John Lambert, credited as the inventor of the first gasoline powered automobile; the Andersontown Pow Wow; and Gaslight Festival; Elwood's Callaway Park; the art of glass making and more. This year the "Now Entering..." logo was updated to a modern retro badge design, the original small-town icon the water tower, and playful new typefaces.

The crew will hit the road again in 2024, so stay tuned to see where we go next!

IPR Radio Drama

Indiana Public Radio hosted our 14th Annual Holiday Radio Drama, in partnership with Ball State's Department of Theatre and Dance, live from Sursa Performance Hall on December 14.

"All Out for Christmas: A Showbiz Radio Fable," is an original work by David Taylor Little, assistant teaching professor of theatre directing at Ball State. It is directed by Matthew Reeder, associate professor of directing, and Jim Rhinehart, associate professor of musical theatre, is the music director and composer.

It's 1947, and a big Broadway star has come to a small Midwest radio station to be in their annual Christmas radio show. Will her appearance save the radio station from financial ruin? Will the ingenue and the young radio technician find romance? Will the songwriters be able to compose a catchy melody to sell the show?

A cast of community and campus actors, singers and musicians took the stage at Sursa Performance Hall for the live performance and broadcast on IPR. The production included live music and sound effects on stage to recreate an authentic radio drama experience.

Chris Flook, associate lecturer in the Department of Media at Ball State, produced the television production of the radio drama which aired on Ball State PBS.

Ball State Public Media members were treated to a private pre-show reception and meet & greet with the creative team, where they were able to hear from the director, playwright and actors about the performance they were about to witness.

"TO ME, IPR'S RADIO DRAMA ISN'T JUST A FUN WAY TO CELEBRATE THE SEASON, IT'S AN ESSENTIAL EXERCISE IN CONNECTION, SOMETHING WORTH CELEBRATING 24/7."

—Dr. Jennifer Blackmer, Professor, Department of Theatre and Dance, Ball State University

Elevating the Arts

Ball State Public Media is launching an exciting arts and culture content initiative, with generous support from The Indiana Arts Commission (IAC) and Indiana Public Broadcasting Stations (IPBS). The IAC has also honored the organization with the prestigious Indiana Arts Trust award, solidifying its commitment to promoting the arts in the state.

With these grants, Ball State Public Media is poised to take its commitment to the arts to the next level. The initiative aims to showcase the vibrant arts and cultural landscape of East Central Indiana while fostering creativity, community engagement, and artistic exploration. Dr.

Phil Hoffman, assistant dean of Media and general manager of Ball State Public Media, expressed his gratitude for the support, highlighting the impact it will have on the organization's mission.

"This funding will allow us to amplify the voices of artists, performers, and cultural institutions in Indiana, enriching the lives of our viewers and promoting the diverse artistic spirit of our state," Dr. Hoffman noted. The funds provided by the IAC and IPBS will enable Ball State Public Media to develop a comprehensive arts and culture content strategy, which will encompass a wide range of art forms, cultural traditions, and artistic endeavors within Indiana. The new content will feature interviews, digital short-form series, documentaries, performances, and a behind-the-scenes look into the creative process. This initiative will utilize digital platforms and social media channels to reach a broader audience and encourage interactive engagement.

Notably, the Indiana Arts Trust award bestowed upon Ball State Public Media by the Indiana Arts Commission is a significant recognition of the organization's commitment to promoting the arts and fostering creativity throughout the state. As an Indiana Arts Trust award winner, Ball State Public Media joins a select group of organizations dedicated to advancing the arts in Indiana.

"We are honored to receive this recognition from the Indiana Arts Commission," Dr. Hoffman said. "It affirms our dedication to highlighting the talent, diversity, and cultural richness that exists in our region. We are excited to utilize these grant funds to strengthen our programming and better serve our community." The grants from the IAC and IPBS have paved the way for a new chapter in Ball State Public Media's journey. The upcoming local content initiative, set to launch in late 2023, promises to offer audiences a unique and immersive arts and culture experience. With the organization's unwavering dedication and the support of these grants, the cultural landscape of Indiana is in for a transformation that will delight and engage communities throughout the region.

STATEWIDE NEWS COLLABORATION

Ball State Public Media is a member station of Indiana Public Broadcasting (IPBS). As part of the organization's statewide journalism collaboration, IPR Managing Editor Stephanie Wiechmann sits on the organization's News Content Council and provides news coverage, monitors ethical standards, and creates opportunities for reporting collaborations. IPR broadcasts IPBS content daily on its air and regularly contributes news stories for any member station to utilize. IPR news stories shared to the statewide collaboration in 2023 included coverage of a deadly shooting at a Muncie party with 500- 1,000 people, the sentencing of a Muncie police officer on federal excessive force charges, and a state legal settlement with a large local property management company for deceptive practices.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION COVERAGE

Indiana held a municipal election in November of 2023, with contests for mayors, city council, and other city positions. Ball State Public Media tracked and reported on local election results in eight of its counties. IPR's news team also covered local candidate announcements and forums during election season.
